This iPad is supervised and managed by University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Device Supervision

Supervision gives institutions greater control over the iOS devices they own. With supervision, your administrator can apply extra restrictions like turning off AirDrop or preventing access to the App Store. It also provides additional device configurations and features such as silently updating apps or filtering web use.

See what your administrator is supervising

Your administrator controls settings on your device by installing profiles. If you want to see which features your administrator has modified, you will need to check your settings. Tap Settings > General > Profiles & Device Management. If there is a profile installed, tap on it to see which settings it modifies. To learn more about the features changed by your organization, ask your administrator.

Access to location and Internet activity

Your organization cannot access the location of your device without using a feature called Managed Lost Mode. When this mode is enabled, your device is first locked and only then can your device administrator see its location. If your administrator puts your device into Managed Lost Mode, you will see a message on the lock screen. If your organization has requested the location of your device, a notification will remain on the lock screen until the device is unlocked by you. Your organization can't see the location of your device without locking it and showing this notification to you.

Supervision can be used to configure your device to provide access to Wi-Fi networks, VPN servers, proxy servers, and Internet content filters. These network settings have the ability to route your Internet activity through your organization's networks where it can be secured and also possibly viewed by your administrator. To learn more about how your Internet activity is being used by your organization, ask your administrator.
